We spend most days at the land trust looking forward—asking, what can we do now to guarantee a quality future on this coast for generations to come? The regional needs and community desires and demographics are changing rapidly here on the North Coast, and I sometimes ask myself, can we keep pace?

A look back at the past year assures me that the answer is a resounding yes. We expanded our staff and welcomed new board members and, in so doing, greatly expanded and built upon our skill-set and ability to work with a diversity of landowners and public representatives. We closed on some key land acquisitions. Years of land stewardship bore fruit when we watched record numbers of wild coho salmon return to our conserved streams. And we saw a 28% increase in the number of people donating to support our work. With more than 20 new projects coming down the pike, we will need to increase our donor support again in order to accomplish our potential, and with your help, we will. It is your support—in dollars, in volunteer hours, in sharing our mission and our vision—that allows us to keep pace with these exciting and challenging times.

In our 25th year, NCLC will be creating a strategic conservation plan for the globally rare Sitka spruce swamp system at the mouth of the Columbia River. We will be partnering with our friends and neighbors in the Lower Nehalem Community Trust to enjoy an eye-opening view of the estuary on our third annual Riding the Coastal Edge train trip. Most significant of all, we will start collaborating with public and private land-holders on one of the largest conservation projects this region has ever seen: creation of a Rainforest Reserve stretching from the rocky basaltic ridge tops to the ocean shore.

Each day I am thankful for the incredible support we have received from all of you over the years, especially through our leadership transition from our founding director to the next generation. Cheers to another great year!

Katie Voelke
Katie Voelke, Executive Director
Among the highlights of 2010 at NCLC was the arrival of Jon Wickersham as our new Conservation Director. A North Coast native back after a sojourn in the high plains of Montana, Jon has brought fresh enthusiasm and energy to NCLC along with a degree in planning, public policy and management, and experience as a county planner.

Jon stepped in as NCLC founder and Conservation Director Neal Maine realized a long-held goal of finally retiring from an active staff position with the land trust. Neal is now enjoying having the time to pursue his passion for nature photography, establishing PacificLight Images with his fellow photographer and grandson Michael Wing. Neal continues to be an active supporter of NCLC, and we continue to be amazed at his capacity to inspire those around him to celebrate the unique landscape of the Oregon Coast. PacificLight Images has joined our new business supporter program and is donating a percentage of its sales to NCLC.

At the end of 2010, we were honored to have three members of our North Coast community agree to join the board of North Coast Land Conservancy. Former Head Start Administrator Betsy Ayres is a long-time Cannon Beach resident well known for her passion and community activism on Oregon’s North Coast. Contractor John Mersereau has lived in Arch Cape for many years and is dedicated to the stewardship of the coastal landscape he values. After a career with Alaska Fish and Game, Eastern Oregon native Kevin Brownlee has settled in Nehalem where he raises horses with his wife Marla and continues to work on behalf of wildlife.

As we head into our 25th year, all of us at NCLC are excited about the opportunities ahead to further the conservation of this amazing coastal bioregion.
LAND IN TRANSITION

In December of 2010, after four patient years, three landowners, countless trips to the title company, a grant from the Oregon Watershed Enhancement Board and the help of two generous conservation buyers, NCLC finally acquired the 33-acre Necanicum Forest property adjoining Klootchy Creek County Park outside Seaside. This vibrant second-growth forest along the Necanicum River mainstem create a contiguous mile of conserved Necanicum river corridor and over 1/4 mile conserved along Klootchy creek.

NCLC staff and board members gathered with the staff of Lewis and Clark National Historical Park and members of the public on a sunny October day to celebrate the transfer of the 100-acre Yeon Property from NCLC to National Park Service ownership. We remain engaged in the future of this gem along the Neacoxie Wildlife Corridor through the conservation easement we now hold on the property. We look forward to continuing our productive relationship with the staff of Lewis and Clark National Historical Park as we join together in stewardship of this beautiful region.

Our thanks go out to the many organizations and agencies who worked in partnership with North Coast Land Conservancy this year. Because of your support and investment, NCLC was able to take great strides forward toward achieving key conservation and stewardship goals in 2010.

Since 2006, North Coast Land Conservancy has partnered with Tongue Point Job Corps—one of the nation’s largest residential education and vocational training centers for economically disadvantaged youth—to provide on-the-ground stewardship opportunities for its students. Tongue Point is located just east of Astoria, on the Columbia River.

NCLC Stewardship Director Celeste Coulter determines which of our many properties is in need of work to reach our stewardship goals. Once a month, a crew of students from Tongue Point meets Celeste at the designated property and helps with whatever needs to be done there. Crews have removed ivy from wetlands in Warrenton, Scotch broom from Stanley Marsh in Seaside, purple loosestrife at the Wolf Creek along the Columbia River, and blackberries from everywhere. They have planted thousands of trees and shrubs on NCLC properties all along the North Coast, helping to create hundreds of acres of habitat for native wildlife.

The hours of labor that the Tongue Point Job Corps crews provide to NCLC each month are a critical contribution to the success of our stewardship program.

Many thanks go to the leaders at Tongue Point Job Corps for helping to coordinate this program and to the hundreds of students who have shared their youthful energy with us!

STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL ACTIVITY

For fiscal year ending September 30, 2010

North Coast Land Conservancy has seen tremendous growth and change in the last fiscal year. The strong foundation that our board, staff and volunteers are building together gives us great confidence about our future. Outreach efforts this year have resulted in many new connections throughout our community and growing support for the work of NCLC.

A 32% increase in donations was spurred in part by the 119 new supporters making first-time financial contributions to NCLC. We are pleased to have such dedicated individuals join the hundreds of people on the North Coast and throughout the country who support our work to achieve meaningful conservation on the Oregon Coast.

Patience is a necessary part of land acquisition, and closure does not always come within fiscal year boundaries. This past calendar year has seen several land deals straddle budgets and timelines. You will see these projects reflected in the revenue and expense reporting each year.

Our fiscal goals in 2011 will see us striving to increase our donations by a further 50% to ensure that the essential work needed to achieve our goals will continue.

We take a long view as we work toward our vision, and our staff, board and volunteers are dedicated to making each of your contributions translate into exponential returns on the land.

Thank you for being a part of our journey!
